

The Forestry Commission is already playing an important role in combating climate change, and in helping our forests adapt to climate change

Case Studies

The following case studies seek to provide some practical examples of what the Forestry Commission is already doing to try to combat and adapt to climate change. This is not an exhaustive list, but can be added to at any time.

Case Study 1:

Adaptation: National Arboreta Long Term Planning Group

Case Study 2:

Adaptation and long term planning: Jeskyns

Case Study 3:

Mitigation (woodfuel) and Adaptation (research): Bedgebury

Case Study 4:

Mitigation - using more wood in building: Cannock, Dalby and Westonbirt

